

Everything is in a continuous process of change. 'Relations' 2021

'Servile Acrimony' is a painting from my personal explorations as a young artist beginning my journey. With the birth of my daughter, my personal journey expanded to the magical world of children. Children are amazing thinkers and artists. I soon realized how a society covers up the brilliance and universality of children. So began my life passion to learn from children and to help children explore and dream. Most importantly—to interact with what is made with our hearts, minds and hands. Art making with the main ingredient being sincerity.

Over many years, I have been able to see social changes . Some of the changes are positive social awareness changes. These changes in turn encourage change in the collective human spirit. Other observations through out the past are very ominous and discouraging as a human. This tragic human flaw has changed society in some traumatic ways effecting our community and global communities bringing despair to the intimacy of the family.

This collective journey of change is with our families in mind. Our People, Our Natural Environment, and Our Governance are Connected. I choose to explore these connections to inspire and influence humans by respecting the truth of the connection between earth and humans. The following series begins with the intimacy and interdependence of our family connections. This has become a series inspired by the heartwarming honesty of children, the relationships amongst family, and the study of the Book of Changes to help guide my understanding of these truths shared by humans. Even with disconnection, our families are interconnected. May we share, heal, and grow together.
